

MRS. VANDERBILT IS RECOVERING

Her Mother Says She Passed a Quiet Night After Being Injured by a Fall at the Theatre.

UNCONSCIOUS 15 MINUTES.

Removed to Her Box, Where She Finally Recovers, After Which She Is Taken to the Greer Cottage for the Night.

When The Evening World called upon the home of Reginald C. Vanderbilt at Newport, over the long distance telephone today Mrs. Frederick Neilson, mother-in-law of the young millionaire, stated that her daughter had passed a quiet night and was recovering rapidly from the effects of her fall at the theatre last night.

A little later it was announced that the young matron had so far recuperated that she had been driven in an automobile to Sandy Point farm by her husband. After the accident at the theatre, which it was at first feared might be followed by serious consequences, Mrs. Vanderbilt was taken to the summer home of her mother, where she was watched over during a greater part of the night by her husband and Dr. Anderson.

Today the latter said that he did not apprehend any danger to his patient, even in view of the recent delicate condition of her health.

The accident to Mrs. Vanderbilt was a painful one.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, with her husband and a party of friends, was at the theatre to see the Princess of Kensington.

The night was cold and the theatre was crowded. Before the close of the performance Mrs. Vanderbilt grew faint, and arising from her place in her box, went to the entrance leading into the main auditorium. There is a slight step from the box to the other part of the house, and in the semi-darkness Mrs. Vanderbilt did not see it.

She placed one foot forward and the next instant had fallen. Besides the fact that accompanies the making of a misstep on a pair of stairs she fell upon her hands and side and wrenched herself.

Taken Back to Her Box.

Mr. Vanderbilt, who was just behind her, raised her, with the assistance of others, and she was taken back to the box, where she was laid on the floor and the first nurse searched for cushions. Miss Helen McGowan, the manager, did all possible, and when Dr. Powers came off the stage in his sailor tugs to render assistance. He saw at once that air was needed above all, and he ordered the curtain raised. Chief of Police Richards and other friends of Mr. Vanderbilt in the audience also assisted.

Mr. Richards found some cushion among the properties, and he provided Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt with a large stage fan, which she used over her sister-in-law to excellent advantage.

Meanwhile Dr. Rufus Darrah and Dr. William H. Anderson, who were in the audience, were summoned to Mrs. Vanderbilt, who had been taken to a swoon about fifteen minutes, and she recovered consciousness. An examination showed that she was very much frightened, but otherwise unharmed. She was taken to her box, and said that she felt as if she could go home.

Taken to Doctor's Home.

It was deemed best, though, that she rest for some time, and as she gradually grew stronger she was carried to the Vanderbilt coach and taken to the residence of Dr. Anderson, in Pelham street.

Later, she having improved still more, she was taken to the Greer Cottage where her mother, Mrs. Frederick Neilson, has apartments for the night. She is expected to remain there a few days, and condition improves. She will then go to the Reginald Vanderbilt cottage.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was heavily injured, the weight of which added considerably to the force of her fall. Her husband, who was the first to reach her side, was naturally very much disturbed over the accident, and for a short while, till Mrs. Vanderbilt had been taken back to the box and rendered comfortable, he was evidently very much frightened.

TRUCK COULDN'T BEAT TRAIN

So Engine Strikes It and Hurls Out the Driver.

"I know it's comin', but this ain't a racin' suit," was what William McCarty, a driver of a five-ton coal truck, said to himself to-day while on the incline of the Long Island Railroad track at Atlantic and Carlton avenues. In an instant McCarty was sprawling over Long Island territory, and his truck, laden with coal, was scattered all over the road.

The suburban train that hit him came to a sudden stop. The cow-catcher and the headlight of the locomotive were jammed, and the engines were badly shaken up and scared by the breaking of glass, but that was the sum of the casualties.

McCarty, who had been hurled through space, was bruised and cut. The truck belonged to Z. O. Nelson, a Brooklyn coal dealer.

FAIR CLUB MEMBERS LEARN HOW TO BREATHE AND STAND

Lesson Is Pronounced Lively, but Must Be Learned in Proper Costume to Be Enjoyed.

"Now, say 'boo'."

"B-o-o-o!"

No, dear reader, this is not an account of the recitation of the primer class. "Boo" and "bell" and "key" are some of the words—hard-to-pronounce words—that Mr. Neidlinger taught the members of the Professional Women's League to say.

Mr. Neidlinger is a writer of songs. He also teaches persons how to sing them, how to stand correctly and how to breathe and speak correctly.

After he had given the P. W. L. sisters a few real hard words like those quoted to pronounce, he told them how to breathe correctly.

"Isn't he lovely?" said one League member.

"Perfectly grand," replied another. "If he makes us breathe much deeper, I know my stays won't stand it," said another.

Some of those who listened to Mr. Neidlinger's address were Ada Olman, Anna Stannard, Myra Brooks, Lillian Russell, Miss Cregan and other prominent members of the histrionic and literary world.

For a while Mr. Neidlinger spoke on the poor education of ministers. Then he suggested that the members of the League repeat the Lord's Prayer after him. Before it was finished many of the members sat down.

"Now we will take up the proper method of breathing," said Mr. Neidlinger. "Most persons breathe improperly; that is, they breathe from the chest. This is wrong. We should all breathe from the diaphragm. Like this, and he illustrated."

"The fair members of the League were told that proper breathing was the greatest aid to beauty and good complexion, and they were all willing to try."

"Breathe deep now—deep—deep!" Mr. Neidlinger said, and he was over his head and then the sound of snapping strings, and one after another the

WARRANT FOR ALLEN AS HE LEAVES JAIL

Post-Office Robber, Who, with Killoran, Escaped Prison Here, Must Stand Trial After Long Term in England.

HE IS WANTED IN ILLINOIS.

Prisoner Does Not Know an Officer Is Waiting to Arrest Him When He Is Released—Crime Committed in 1895.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Charles Allen, the famous American criminal, terminates several years' imprisonment at Dartmouth on Dec. 5. As he walks out of prison he will be re-arrested on an extradition warrant, charging him with a daring post-office robbery at Springfield, Ill., in 1895.

Late in that year Allen and Killoran broke out of Ludlow Street Jail, New York, and escaped to England. It was only after Allen had been convicted here of robbing the Birkenhead Bank that his identity was discovered.

Allen is quite ignorant of the reception which awaits him the moment he regains his freedom.

The robberies committed by Allen did not bring him the fame which later attached to his name after his sensational escape from Ludlow Street Jail.

He and Joe Killoran were arrested in this city in the latter part of 1888 and were sent to the Ludlow Street Jail as Federal prisoners, there to wait for trial on charges of robbing post-offices.

Allen and Killoran had not been in jail long when they escaped. They secured valuable assistance from somewhere. They were armed with revolvers and had plenty of money. They went to France and later Allen was arrested in Germany, but escaped punishment. He and Killoran turned many lucrative "tricks" in Europe until Allen was arrested in London three years ago for the theft of a box of jewels from the Berkebeck Bank.

Fred Gehard Gets Back His House

Frederick Gehard got back yesterday the Seventy-ninth street mansion which he built near 18th avenue three years ago for his bride, Miss Lulu Morris, of Baltimore, now Mrs. Henry Clews, Jr. Mrs. Gehard, who held title to the property, after her divorce transferred it to Lawyer W. C. Bowers, of Bowers & Sands, who transferred it to Mr. Gehard yesterday with a mortgage of $111,300.

League members sat down. A number of them voted it a good thing, but to be tried only when in proper costume.
